The Top Ten Worst Decisions by a Body of Nine of Our Leaders

From the home office of freedom we bring you tonight the Top Ten Worst Supreme Court Decisions:

10. Santa Clara County v. Southern Pacific Railroad (1886)

Needlessly, but purposely, obscure, so obscure that probably not even Alex Trebek's crack research staff could tell you the details of the case Its significant ignominy lies in Chief Justice Waite's making explicit what had been implicit for several years, something that has pervaded and perverted the polity to the present day:
"The court does not wish to hear argument on the question whether the provision in the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution, which forbids a State to deny any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws, applies to corporations We are all of the opinion that it does" Hey, all together now:
Corporations are people, too

9. Schenck v. United States (1919)

Oliver Wendell Holmes, son of The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table, often (mistakenly) called The Great Dissenter, in reality more accurately called The King of the Weak Analogy:
"The most stringent protection of free speech would not protect a man in falsely shouting fire in a theater and causing a panic"
Of course the man who said
"man's destiny is to fight" failed to say what was false
and also failed to say what was shouting fire in signing a petition,
and
urging other to also sign, for the repeal of the draft

8. Minersville School Board v. Gobitis (1940)

A clerical error, in addition to the judicial one Lillian and William Gobitas, as Jehovah's Witnesses, had refused to salute the flag and recite the Pledge of Allegiance and were thus expelled from school "Religious belief does not relieve the citizen from the discharge of political responsibilities" "We live by symbols"
"National unity is the basis of national security" The government could cram down children's throats, with impunity, beliefs,
"contrary to those implanted by the parent" With eight of the nine justices agreeing to such recruiting poster jurisprudence, it was open season on the Witnesses The horrors their German brethren had experienced under Hitler were unleashed on them: their Halls were burned down; they were publicly humiliated; they were kidnapped;
they were beaten;
they were even castrated, though the line was drawn at placing them in American concentration camps That 'honor' would be bestowed on others

7. Bowers v. Hardwick (1986)

Big Brother was peeping in the bedrooms of members of Georgia's gay community One of the homophobic heat had earlier ticketed Michael Hardwick for having an open beer bottle outside
And
even though Hardwick had paid the fine, the cop was somehow able to get an arrest warrant for failure to pay the fine, legal harassment we should be free from The cop pushed open the bedroom door and saw Hardwick engaged in what the law defined as sodomy Hardwick was convicted,
and the case made its way to the Court The majority voted to uphold the conviction, and Whizzer White, who must have played his football without a helmet, cited "the belief of a majority of the electorate in Georgia that homosexual sodomy is immoral and unacceptable" and that "the law is constantly based on notions of morality" The lawyer representing Georgia admitted that no heterosexual would ever be prosecuted under that same law,
and even after that admission equal protection under the law was conspicuous by its absence One of the majority justices repented a few years later (after his retirement),
and people are still being killed for being who they are

6. Buck v. Bell (1927)

The King of the Weak Analogy strikes again "It is better for all the world, if instead of waiting to execute degenerate offspring for crime, or let them starve for their imbecility, society can prevent those who are manifestly unfit from continuing their kind" Of course neither Carrie Buck nor the daughter she had borne before her forced sterilization according to Virginia law were anything remotely resembling imbeciles The 'eminent' man showed once again that a strong opinion and an intelligent opinion weren't necessarily synonymous

5. Loewe v. Lawlor (1908)

In this case
The Great Dissenter was just another sheep unanimously following Fuller's lead The United Hatters of North America were calling for a boycott of the Danbury Hat Company, whom they were striking against in hopes of winning union recognition Dietrich Loewe of the hat company sued Martin Lawlor of the union for damages under the Sherman Anti-trust Act The rhetoric of Social Darwinism (never uttered by Darwin himself) was ascendant in America at the time,
and
the experience of work, in general,
and the dangers of mercury poisoning that led them to be called mad hatters, in particular, were far removed from Fuller's flock "Any combination whatever" in restraint of trade was illegal, at least when allegedly done by a labor union,
and the justices' economic prejudices were thus enshrined as the nation's law

4. United States v. Cruikshank (1876)

Morrison (Light) Waite strikes again To celebrate the centennial of America the Chief Justice and his co-conspirators considered the case of one William Cruikshank, who had taken part in the Colfax, Louisiana massacre and had been convicted, along with two others, of depriving Levi Nelson and Alexander Tillman, two black men who had defended the Colfax courthouse against the marauding mob of whites, of life and liberty without due process of law,
and
of preventing the two men from exercising their right to peacably assemble, permanently Louisiana had not prosecuted Cruikshank for murder, forcing the Federal government to prosecute him for depriving the two men of their rights It was
"no more the duty or within the power of the United States" to protect its citizens when a state failed to do so,
and thus was created a literal and figurative no-man's land, actually a no-black-man's land, land first fenced off forty years earlier

3. Korematsu v. United States (1944)

The 'honor' denied the Witnesses was bestowed on Fred Korematsu and a hundred thousand others "Hardships are a part of war
and war is an aggregation of hardships" sounded like more recruiting poster jurisprudence,
and
the government's aggregate lies about the 'dangers' posed by American citizens of Japanese ancestry imposed the hardships of the concentration camp "The legalization of racism" , in the words of one dissenter, dressed in the clothes of 'military necessity' "lies about like a loaded weapon ready for the hand of any authority that can bring forward a plausible claim of urgent need" (in the words of another dissenter) Fred Korematsu and the others received and apology and some small compensation nearly forty years after being so shot at The gun is still lying around

2. Plessy v. Ferguson (1896)

Nearly forty years after the Dred Scott debacle,
and thirty years after the Civil War was fought
and the Reconstruction Amendments adopted to correct that egregious error, the Eight Dwarfs decided, with only John Marshall Harlan dissenting, "We consider the underlying fallacy of the plaintiff's argument to consist in the assumption that the enforced separation of the two races stamps the colored race with a badge of inferiority If this be so, it is not by reason of anything found in the act, but solely because the colored race chooses to put that construction upon it", saying that inequality was not inequality, previewing Orwellian doublespeak fifty years early,
and thus ensuring that yet another American revolution would one day be necessary

1. Dred Scott v. Sandford (1857)

The grandaddy of 'em all The Court achieved a perverse perfection, managing to get everything wrong in this case, from yet another clerical error that misspelled the defendant's name, to the important matters of law A black was not three-fifths of a person, as the Constitution said in its original imperfection; blacks were "regarded as beings of an inferior order
and
altogether unfit to associate with the white race, either in social or political relations;
and so far inferior that they had no rights that the white man was bound to respect" Old Hickory's henchmen had had their say,
and the great genocidal General Jackson was gleeful in his grave, where he would very soon be joined by several hundred thousand of his countrymen
